

Music Care Program

“Music is the great uniter. An incredible force. Something that people who differ on everything and anything else can have in common.”

- Sarah Dessen

As an approach to care, music is recognized for its ability to increase quality of life. Music is universally enjoyed even before birth. Research shows the therapeutic benefits of music to be profound and easily facilitated in many different settings. At Roger Neilson House music is used to create a person-centered approach to care, providing children with a new and innovative sensory experience as they enjoy making music together and with staff.

THE GOALS OF MUSIC CARE

- Provide the children with an adapted experience to make music.
- Stimulate sensory exploration.
- Create community and socialization.
- Create a relaxation response, decrease anxiety.
- Manage pain and symptoms.
- Validate complex emotions.
- Increase quality of life.
